

ALEXANDRIA.

THURSDAY EVENING, MARCH 29.

DURING THE recent strike on the Burlington Railroad, one of the officers of the striking Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers said that Brotherhood had $860,000 to its credit, that its members could afford to go notice, thus producing a capital of $3,610,-000, and that at least seventy five per cent. of the members have homes and a competence laid by. Now, this shows one of two things: either that the officer referred to is a "mouther," or else that the members of his organization are better paid than any other class of the country's population, and therefore had no good reason to strike.

THE PRESIDENT of the Indiana civil service reform association testified before a congressional investigating committee yesterday to the effect that civil service reform made a pretty bad show in his State. Similar testimony could be readily obtained from all the other States in the Union. The civil service law is a transparent humbug, that is means of keeping their own friends in office, and should be repealed as soon as possible. The government got along very well out it for a bundred years, and could do so for another hundred without any trouble.

THE RICHMOND Dispatch rather inclines to the proposed issue of fractional silver certificates-stuff similar to the dirty and greasy small notes that disgraced the country during and shortly after the war, and by the issue of which the government robbed the people of fifteen million dollars, as that much of it was lost and never redeemedand asks, "How are the country people to be supplied with mailable small change?" Why, with postage stamps, which they can readily obtain in quantities to suit at their nearest postoffice.

THE PAGE News says: "The ALEXANDRIA GAZETTE is the ablest and most progressive paper in Virginia." The News is evidently a just and appreciative critic. If all the democratic newspapers in the State would speak as they, as good and true democrats, must think of both State and national affairs, as the Gazette does, Virginia would not be, as it is with too good reason, included among the doubtful States.

THE BLOODY shirters in Congress are either unfamiliar with the speeches of the late Mr. Garfield, or else they have no faith in, and spurn and repudiate his policy, for he said: "The man who attempts to get up a political excitement in this country on the old sectional issues will find himself without a party and without support." And yet Mr. Garfield was elected President after giving public expression to such a policy.

A distinguished and influential democratic Senator, in talking to the GAZETTE'S correspondent this morning about the next national democratic ticket, said all appearan ces now indicated the renomination of Mr. Cleveland, and that such would certainly be the case unless the New York delegation to the convention should oppose it. continued be, "you and I and all other true democrate will support him after his nomination, because he is unquestionably better than any man the republicans dare nominate." Continuing he said, if re elected, the experience of his first term, so far, proves that Mr. Cleveland would be the most autocratic President the country has ever had. He hardly listens, and pays less attention to the recommendations of his party now, when his re-election is in doubt, and if secure of another term, knowing that would be last, it is not unlikely he would set his party at open defiance, and be more absolute than any king on earth. The working democrats he has ignored during his first term would certainly receive no more recog-

A caucus of the republican Senators was held this morning. At it Messre. Allison, Sherman and Hawley assailed Mr. Stewart for his silver amendments to the bill for the Government, as reported in the Congressionredemption of bonds, just on the eve of a al Record: Presidential campaign. So plausible were their reasons, from a party standpoint, that Mr. Stewart apparently saw them. The result was the appointment of a committee to arrange the order of legislation.

In the Senate to day Mr. Daniel, from the committee on public buildings reported the bill for a public building at Norfolk, amend ed by striking out $250,000 as the amount to be appropriated therefor, and inserting in place thereof $150,000. In response to a en-quiry as to the cost of suitable approaches to the south end of the Aqueduct Bridge, a communication was received from the Secretary of War to the effect that the probable cost would be $45,000. Mr. Daniel presented the petition of J. R. Hur-ley, ex-postmaster at Liberty, Va., that his salary be computed under the law of 1854. The Senate agreed that when it adjourns to day it will be until Saturday, so as to hold no session on Good Friday. The committee was ad dressed by Gen. Hunton and by Messrs. Hume, Harlow and Fox. After the meet ing had adjourned the GAZETTE's correspondent asked Mr. Lanham, the chairman of the committee, what its action would probably be. He replied that the committee did not consider the subject after the delegation retired, but that as it could not take cognizance of private claims, he sup posed the committee would have to let the is. He said, however, that none of the members of the committee seemed to be opposed to the proposed avenue.

Representative Perry Belmont, of New York, whose disappearance for the last day or two gave rise to a report that he was dead, appeared in his seat this morning, apparently as fresh as ever. Virginia republicans, here to-day, ray the prevalent idea that the apparent difference between General Mahone and Mr. John man in it in my devotion to them (not to the Wise is only a pretence, and one of the cause, for I yield that). former's "method's," is entirely incorrect, and that the breach between the General and his ex chief lieutenant has become so wide that it is doubtful if it will ever be healed. The backing Mr. Wise receives from the kickers sustains him in his opposition to his late "Master," and the strength of that backing only increases the General's aversion for his lack of gratitude. It is true that Mr. Wise has written a letter to ex-Senator Lewis, in which he says General Mahone is the mittee, and that he serve times himself to other best man for the chairmanship of the State but at the same time he says he intends to tion has set the General against him as much as if he were personally offensive in his opposition, and it is not at all unlikely that the difference may result in personalities. > Mr. Riddleberger. Perhaps I had better go on with the few remarks I want to make on this bill.

I formerly said, as I thought, enough from the standpoint of a Confederate soldier. I did the republican element of this Senate injustice in the opening remarks I then made. I had heard some suggestions of disapproba tion from this side of the Chamber, and I did the Senators on this side, with one pos sible exception, the injustice to have used But I cannot see the objection to it [this bill] which seems to have seized hold of the minds of some of the Senators on this side of the Chamber. I perused the Record the next morning and I found that the objections came from Confederate soldiers on the other side of the Chamber. It is to them that I propose to reply. I am the only republican, I suppose, in the Senate who was a Confederate and dare to say so now, and dare to be a republican notwithstanding the epithets hurled at him who served from Mechanicsville to Harrison's Landing under the banner of the Sen ator from South Carolina, then commanding a division in which I had the bonor to

The public mind can not be misled by statements made in the Congressional Record.
I propose to make the bill a part of the rec ord, and for that purpose I shall read it my self:

Be it enacted, etc., That before persons shall be appointed to the civil service of the United States it shall be made to appear whether such persons were loyal to the Government of the United States during the war of the rebellion, if of lawful age any time during said war.

I will submit this to every Grand Army post in this country, and I apprehend that no men who were soldiers would object to it. But, further, it provides:

And whenever such persons not loyal to the United States during said war shall be ap-pointed to office in the civil service, those not dis-honorably discharged from military or naval ser-vice of the so-called Confederate States and now suffering from disability resulting from wounds or sickness incurred in said service shall be preferred to other persons not shown to have been loyal in the war of the rebellion : Provided, They are found to possess the business capacity necessary to the proper discharge of such offices.

I would submit this proposition to the Grand Army posts; I would take the opinion of the Federal soldiers here to day, and ask, we are to take men for the civil service of the Government of the United States, and men from the South, whether we should not give preference to the maimed Confederate. As I said the other day, if you want a loyal man, take a man who fought.

I am glad to be able to have this opportunity of calling the attention of some men in the South to the fact that they are still representing ideas hateful to the South rather bill they had already reported remain as it than its patriotism. I read in this Record is. He said, however, that none of the that no Confederate soldier asks anything in the way of favor from the Federal Gov ernment. I agree that this emanated from the mouth of an eminent Confederate sold Mr. President, the Confederates have had very few to voice their wishes. They have had no channel through which to express themselves in the Congress of the Uni ted States. I represent, in some capacity, a fixed the price of flour by act of the Confederate congress at $30 a barrrel, and paid the infantry soldier in the field $11 a month. It was that kind of statesmar ship that passed the conscript act, levied upon the physical power of those States latest to secode from the cradle to the grave, extending that act even to sixty years, and yet exempting one overseer for every twenty slaves.

The Senator from Connecticut | Mr. Hawley | congratulated my colleague on his statesmanlike speech. I felt its tones in the most vital part of the physical man. He has a reputation in the South as being generous. His magnamimity has lately taken the direction of starving the living and then making an appropriation for a tombstone. He is gratified at that expression which emanated almost as if stereotyped, from three tongues on the other side of the chamber, that the Confederate soldiers asked nothing. Mr. President, it is that same kind and quality of statesmanship which was a disgrace to the Confederacy during four years of war which should have put all burdens on others than those following a commander.

I am standing here to day for those who had no slaves, and who were in the armies of the South. They were the Confederate soldiers. The record that they made then, the unchanged record that they have made since, will stand; but I defy the Senator from South Carolina, my colleague from Virginia, and the Senator from Connecticut to represent the views of those who were the real Confederate soldiers, and who to day compose the reviled loyal element of the

I suffered two terms of imprisonment, and a man who challenges my loyalty to the Confederacy during the war does it with the same bazard of his veracity as if he were to challenge my loyalty to the Union to day.

Mr. President, this is not a pleasant task. I am sorry that the crippled soldier whom I wish to represent here has not some one abler than I to present his case, especially ferent religions to be found in that city. when it is antagonized by those under whon he served. I say to you again, they are the loyal element of the South to-day; and they would be the manly element, if they were here to-day, who would not endeavor to doctor a record in disparagement of a com rade. I say I represent them to-day, when they are so misrepresented by those who, when they go home, claim to be their best friends; those who plead patriotism here and talk Confederacy at home.

Mr. President, the Senator from Connecticut expressed congratulations to his Con-federate friend. I have known the Confederate who is to-day the loyal man-not the brigadier or the major general, but the soldier-I have known him when that statesmanship which is impleaded here in his behalf asked him to surrender $5 of his Confederate money for what was $3 in a new issue of the same currency, which might as well have been drowned in the James River and Kanawha Canal. Those were the Confederate soldiers. That is the statesmanship which is extolled. would the Union soldiers have done if they had been required to come back to Washington by that peculiar style of statesmanship, and required to give up $5 of their from Connecticut says that he congratulates my colleague on the statesmanship which

C. MILBURN. at Mayor's Forge, Va., and J. C. MILBURN.

Record needed some notice. I now again call attention to the bill. There are two provisions in it. One is protective of the Union soldier. I think I have, during by service here, shown my regard for him without vaunting it. The other provides that when your

Civil Service Commission, or your civil service administration, shall go South the pref-erence shall be given to the wounded or disab'ed Confederate as against that horde of hungry office-seekers whom you find in every hotel corridor in this city-whom the Union soldiers respect only for gentlemanly deportment when they so entitle themselves. I cannot understand how three Confeder ates and one Federal should oppose this bill

It is useless to tell me, with my experience and almost daily observation, that there are no Confederates, crippled and maimed, beg-ging on the street. I should prefer to state the contrary. I live and work for them when I sm at home; and no one of them has ever contributed a penny for any service I have performed for them.

But, sir, it is a fact, and I state to the Sen ator from South Carolina, that walking from my State to his are legless Confederate sol diers begging bread. I could furnish proof of it from every household in a thousand in the community in which I live. False pride would make some propound a s'atemer which I prefer to have measured by a prop er regard for the truth. We have in soldiers homes alone a multitude to take care of, That will be brought into this arena of dehate, no doubt; but who gets into these soldiers' home? One who is now begging for bread would have about as much chance to get into these so-called homes as an iceberg would have to float through Florida.

I have specified to the Senate what my views are. I know I shall have to submit to criticism for what I have said.
